NOMANSLAND.

For the Intelligencer.

Have you heard of the Legend of Nomanaland
Where the spirit is never at case;
Where the spirit is never at case;
Where the coasts are washed by Phantom waves
That roll on the Phantom seast.
That roll on the Phantom seast.
Where the ghost-haunted fountains
From express-crowned mountains,
Moan mournfully down to the leas.

It is told in this Legend of Nomansland, 'There is neither a vassal or throne; Neither city or temple the traveler sees.—But unguided, he wanders alone; And oft by the fountains That flow from the mountains, He pillows his head on a stone.

It is said there are Valleys in Nomansland, Where the sup's golden lances in vain

Where the sun's golden lances in win
Strike the walls of Darkness and backward fall—
Lie in splinters of light on the plain
Here Hope finds a tomb
In the Fortress of Gloom,
And the angels of sunrise are stain.

It is whispered abroad that in Nomansland
Float the visions of years that are dead?
And we live once more in the days long past,
In the light of the joys that are ded.
And the sun weaves a crown
O'er the heights that look down.
On the Vale where the dream-spectres tread.

There's a fount in a Vale in Nomanaland, Where the lone watcher wrapt in his fears,
Watching Life's gloomy twilight closing the day
As he sits by the Fountain of Tears.

So he silently waits
By the horrible Gates,
'Till the time of their opening appears.

But where is this country of Nomansland, With its landscapes fautastic and queer? Where the ghosts that we note come crowding

When the ghosts that we note come with the fast.

And where spectres we love may appear?

This the country of mind

King and vassal may find.

All the manhood of Mind is made clear.

W. S. Wilson. Wheeling, W. Va., July 20, 1892.

A GENUINE HERO.

A sky of opal and gold, a deep trellised veranda, a novel, and a hammock slung at the most comfortable of angles. With these conditions it was scarcely strange that Haleyon Hartford swayed delightfully between dreamland and the real world that June afternoon, with the fleecy gold of her hair, all guiltless of pin or comb, and the bell sleeves, falling enchantingly away from her round white arms, while one trim slip-pered foot hung from the edge of the hammock.
"Halcyon! Halcyon! Where are you?"

It was one of those exasperating voices which, once having been sweet, had now a vibrant jar to its tones, pain-

Halcyon frowned a little and raised herself on one elbow.

"Oh, Aunt Hal, don't scream so! I was just in such a dream of delight."

"Well, you should have answered, thou!"

then! Aunt Hal came out of the wide, shady hall with an effusive swing of her dra-peries, and seated herself in a bamboo chair close to the hammock.

chair close to the hammock.

She was comïcally like her niece—at least, as much as a woman of thirty-eight could be like a maid of eighteen. There was the same yellow luxuriance of hair, but harsher, drier and suggestive of dye; the same pink and white complexion, artifically heightened; similar features according to the property of the same pink. ilar features, cruelly sharpened by the inexorable hand of time, and teeth just one degree too white and regular to be

The white dress she wore was pain-The write dress say a compelled to use gold-rimmed eye-glasses as she held up a letter to the view of her niece.

"What has happened?" drowsity demanded the latter, lifting a pair of blue eyes, fringed with dark lashes.

"The strangest thing!"
"Another offer of marriage?" hazarded Halcyon, settling on the unlike west thing which could, in her opinion, happen.

thing which could, in her opinion, happen.

"How did you guess?" with a little exultant cackle. "Exactly. The dear, foolish lad—and he so much younger than I! Why, he couldn't have been twenty-one when he went to Bombay, and I was at least thirty then..."

"Thirty-five, Aunt Hal," said Halcyon, the merciless.

"Was it so much as that? Well, he seemed desperately in love, then; though of course I never took any notice of the child. But I suppose in that of the child. But I suppose in that country of blackamoors one can't help thinking about all the women one has ever known at home; and he has written me two or three letters—"

"Has he?" of the child. But I suppose in that

Halcyon sat straight up in the hammock now. Her blue eyes glowed. The heat had brought a flush to her cheek which all Aunt Hal's carmine sauces could not rival.

"But I never told you," said the elder

"But I never told you," said the elder beauty, "because I remembered that there was a sort of boy and girl affair between you and Charlie Blesson when you were at boarding school, and I thought you would be nettled. And here's the proposal at last, dear, with his photograph enclosed."

"Let me see it."

What a brave, good face it was—slightly older and sterner than she had looked upon when the Avancanian looked upon when the Avancanian sailed away three years ago, but yet so strong and manly. She laughed hysterically.

"Shall you accept him?"
Aunt Hal nibbled coquettishly at the edge of the envelope: the new false teeth gleamed in a smile.
"—think—I—shall!"
"And you fourteen years older than he is!"

"People don't think about such things as they used to," reasoned Miss Hartford the elder. "Eros is-immortal,

Halcyon sank back into the hammock

Halcyon sank back into the hammock and reopened her book.

"You must do as you please, of course," said she. "After that quotation about Eros, I have not a suggestion to offer."

"Jealous, poor darling!" thought Aunt Hal, with a thrill of pity. And she said:

well, of course one can't help those things happening to one, and your time will come soon, dear, never lear."

"It's a good thing," she added to her-

fear."

"It's a good thing," she added to herself, "she does not know anything about dear old Judge Flostroy. There's a difference in age, if you please, and the old pet is so infatuated about me! An old man's darling or a young man's slave—which?"

While Halcyon thought on her side:

"The silly goose! He has done it now! He has been making love to Aunt Hal, thinking he was courting me. Oh, I thought he knew her name was the same as mine. Didn't she stand godmother to me at St. Chrysoline's and give me a coral and bells and an embroideried christening robe? And now he has actually proposed to her. Well, if he is the man I take him to be, he'll stand by his colors, cost him what it may. A man who could walk up to the cannon's mouth at Bey-Idonna surely won't shrink, even from Aunt Hal. And I'd rather know that he was a true here th-than have a poltroon for my husband!"

And Halcyon turned her face toward the pillow, and cried great sparkling

"So you're back again, Lieutenant? Beg pardon, Pd orter said Colonel, I do suppose," said the old cab driver at the station, whom Charlie Blesson had re-membered ever since he was a child. "Well, I declare, I shouldn't hardly be married, eh?"

Blescon bit his lips, but ite laughed carelessly. Jonas Hopper was a privileged individual, like the court jesters of old.

"How did you know, Hopper?"

"Oh, I dunno. Miss Hartford, she's been gettin' ready to be married, this long time" said Jonas, hoisting the colonel's luggage on the back of the wagon. "And dressmakers and milliners they will talk, you know, though I'm told Miss Hal took great pains to hide's?"

"Did she?" (Aside: "The darling.") "And a fine woman she is, colonel," efficiously added Jonas, as he pushed in the last iron-clamped trunk. "A fine woman, considerin' her age. I wonder she ain't married long ago."
Colonel Blesson opened his sleepy black eves wide.

"Why, man, who in the world are you talking about?"

"Why, Miss Hal Hartford, to be

"Why, Miss Hal Hartford, to be sure."
"Hiss Halcyon or Miss Halliana?"
"There ain't no Miss Halliana," said Jonas. "They're both the same name; but we call the aunt Miss Hal and the niece Miss Halcyon. My daughtershe's lady's maid there, and I'd orter know, if any one does."
"And which of them is it that is going to get married?" breathlessly queried Blesson.
"Why, the old 'un, in course! Beg

"Why, the old 'un, in course! Beg pardon!" hurriedly added Jonés. "I mean Miss Hal. Polly she tells me there are twenty-four different gowns ordered; let alone the jackets and parasols and ten-button kid gloves fit to make you hair stand on end."

"And Miss Haleyon—the young lady," cried the colonel—"she is engaged, to?"

"Not as any one knows on. That all,

"Not as any one knows on. That all, colonel? Got your telescope bag? Then we'd better be movin!."

Colonel Blesson pondered seriously all the way up to Hartford Cedars, oblivious of Jonas's incessant stream of talk.

Could it be possible? No, that was utter nonsense! And yet—

He strained his eyes as he approached the house. Surely golden-haired Halcyon would be there, smiling, to meet But no. In her place stood a middleaged charmer, rouged and powdered, with hair gleaming meretriciously, and

The young man had sat down in a listless manner. Aunt Hal held on to his hand, still all his teeth and smiles. "And I may as well tell you at once," said sho, "that I am engaged to Judge Flostroy of the Superior Court. Of course, if I had known of your attachment in time there's no saying."

"A-hem-m-m!" sonorously coughed the luminary of the superior court.

Aunt Hal tripped smilingly forward.

"Glad to see you, Judge," she cooed.

"This is my old playmate, Colonel Blesson, just arrived from India. I dare say.

Colonel, you'll find Halcyon somewhere about the house,"

"Disposed of in short order," muttered Colonel Blesson. "Great heavens!

What have I done to deserve such luck?"

Two hours afterward the young lovers sat on the verands, watching the evening star rise over the hills, while the Judge's basso profundo voice srill rolled in the sitting room like distant

"But would you really have married

"But would you really have marked her?"

"Yes, I would!" with stornly set teeth and knitted brows.

"Then I'll marry you, Colonel Blesson," whispered Haleyon, "because you are a genuine hero, and because," with an arcif glance, "I really think you need a wife to take charge of you."

"After the episode of to-day," said Colonel Blesson, "I really think I do."

The following, clipped from the Burlington Junction (Mo.) Post, contains information of no little value to persons troubled with indigestion:

For years the editor of the Post has been subject to cramp colic or fits of indigestion, that prostrated him for several hours and unfitted him for business for two or three days afterward. About a year ago we called on S. J. Butcher, druggist, and asked for something to ward off an attack that was already making life hideous. Mr. Butcher handed us a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoa Remedy. We took the medicine according to directions, and not only found relief in every instance. We take this method of acknowledging the benefits derived and recommending the cure to all others subject to indigestion. For sale by druggists.
